Vendor of the Week - Grammie's House Creations

Grammie's House Creations is owned by "Grammie" Shirley McKim who began making the crafts and household items for her six grandchildren. While she loved making items for her grandchildren, she also loved the idea of sharing her creations with the community. So she began selling at the Indian Creek Market and joined the Corydon Farmers Market this year as a seasoned vendor.

She creates all of her items in her home basement in Lanesville, most while sitting in her recliner. For children she makes hats, puppets, and stuffed animals. Shirley also creates "Chucks", teething rings and tag blankets, blankets, and head bands for babies. In addition to the items she makes for kids and babies, she makes hand knit dish cloths, scrubbies, kitchen towels, button flowers, hair clips, and ear rings. When asked about why she makes these items Shirley explained, "I sell these items because they interest me and I can make them while I watch basketball on tv during the winter! And I DO watch a lot of basketball!!"

Shirley looks forward to every Friday with great anticipation because she loves the platform that the Corydon Farmers Market has provided for her to share her creations with the community. However, she wants more crafters need to become involved and help us develop a lively, talented place where natives and visitors can find fine handmade items to take home with them.

If you'd like to share your crafts with the community at the Corydon Farmers Market, email brandon@mainstreetcorydon.org for more information.
